PART I. READING

A. Read the text about the life of Michael Palin and answer the questions according to the text.

Michael Palin

Michael Palin was born in 1943. He studied history at Oxford University. Palin met his wife in 1959, but they didn't marry until 1966 when he moved to the USA. After university, he didn't work as a historian—he worked as an actor and a TV writer from 1965 to 1980.

Then, in 1980, he made a TV show about a trip by train, and he found that he loved travel and exploration. So he changed his job. He made travel programs for thirty years.

Palin started to write a personal diary in 1969. He wrote something almost every day. In 2006, he published three books of his diaries. Each book described a period of ten years in his life. Palin says when he prepared the three books, he remembered many things from his life and experiences.

B. Read the text about the changes of appearance and answer the questions according to the text.

Changes of Appearance

Most people don't change their appearance, or their style of clothes, very often but, for some occupations, it's necessary. Film and music stars sometimes change their appearance for their job. Some actors look very different in each film, and they change their appearance in real life too. For example, they become thinner. Nicole Kidman wore a latex nose for The Hours, and she changed her hair colour – it is darker in the film. Renee Zellweger often changes for films. She looked very different in the musical film about the 1920s, Chicago, after she played a modern English journalist in The Diary of Bridget Jones. She spoke differently as Bridget Jones, too – she spoke British English, but she is American!

Male actors change their body more often than female actors. When they're preparing to be superheroes, they go to the gym a lot, they work on their arms, and eat different food. For other films, they lose twenty kilos, or they put on thirty. They change their hair, beards, moustaches – and then they change again, at the end of the job.

For music stars, the situation is different. Top music stars create fashions, they don't follow them. They need a new style every year or two, because they want to stay at the top. In the 1960s and '70s, for example, some created styles that are still fashionable, but that doesn't often happen now. When popular stars nowadays change their appearance a lot and wear strange clothes, we watch their changes, but we don't copy them. Their style or styles are personal. We often take fashion from music and usually from stars that look a little like us. These 'familiar' stars come and go, they don't stay for long. But for music or film stars, who want to stay at the top for a long time, change is good. And change is necessary.
